About Clark

Clark is one of the most enthusiastic, energetic and entertaining presenters in the business. Whether in the boardroom presenting to your executive management team, or on the main stage of your national sales conference, Clark's style connects with everyone. His message is always clear and actionable.

Clark leads Cannon's Performance Coaching and Leader Development initiatives. In addition to training and coaching Clark keynotes at industry gatherings, speaks regularly to wealthy clients on behalf of financial firms, and writes for industry publications.

Clark is one of the owners of Cannon Financial Institute. He began his career as a Municipal Bond salesman in the mid eighties. He has worked both as a Financial Advisor on a brokerage platform and as a Private Banker on a wealth management platform. Clark's product management experience involved developing, launching and building an open architecture wrap investment management program. His sales management experience involved leading, managing and coaching a team of investment management and trust sales professionals.

Since 1998 Clark has continued to serve the financial services industry and the individuals and families they serve by providing the thought leadership required to execute and deliver results in a dynamic and changing environment.

Clark brings powerful analytic skills and creative problem solving to his consulting engagements. He is routinely the lead consultant on Cannon's most significant and challenging consulting projects. He has a proven track record of success. Clark will lead your team through a disciplined process of discovery, analysis, design, implementation and ongoing sustainment.

Clark resides in Athens, GA. He is married and has three children.
